

She Loves Me

Partying with the moon.

Where the fuck did Monday go?

Tuesday?

Wednesday?

Thursday?

What day is it, anyway?

The moon only knows.

Speaking in a different language that I strangely understand.

I love her,
she loves me.

Ey Luna, ill
ou tak e wit?

Esy ma dee, ome
it e.

James D. Casey IV is a southern poet with roots in Louisiana & Mississippi. He currently resides in Illinois with his Muse, their retarded dog, and two black cats. Mr. Casey has authored four books of poetry, and his most recent title is Owls in Hot Rods with Pink Elephants and Dead Bats released August 2, 2018. His work has also been published extensively by several literary magazines and small press venues. Mr. Casey spends his days writing poems, but also enjoys practising magic, and cooking Cajun cuisine.

The Pangolin Review; Issue 7, 8 November 2018