Just A Boy

He is just a boy learning to be a man
He will make mistakes as he does not understand
Pick him up when he falls and ruffle his mane
He is just a boy learning to be a man
Someday he will look back proud of his father, tall he will stand
He is just a boy learning to be a man
He will make mistakes as he does not understand

Troy DeFrates lives in northern Wisconsin, U.S.A., and is an avid outdoorsman. He earned his M.B.A. from Western Illinois University where he found his love of poetry during his studies. He has been published in Spillwords and With The Coffee Magazine. A budding poet, he loves to share his art and attempts to get others to be inspired.