

Shadows Fade

Imperceptibly the shadows of your memories fade
Finally a new sun chases away the shade created by hovering clouds of sorrow
Imperceptibly the shadows of your memories fade
No longer do I need to borrow smiles from the flowers in the glade
Imperceptibly the shadows of your memories fade
Finally a new sun chases away the shade

Living in Singapore, India-born Uma Venkatraman is a journalist who breathes poetry. She has been published in anthologies such as Good Morning Justice, The Rising Phoenix Review, Amethyst Review and Plath Poetry Project. She has also taken part in Tupelo Press' 30/30 Project.

The Pangolin Review; Issue 5, 30 July 2018