

The World Has Been Slumbering

(Translated by Danijela Trajkovic)

Tired
in the armchair
with headphones in the ears
the world has been slumbering
in front of the screen
dead bodies
can't you see?

You just keep talking
advertising
and reviling

These people must be fresh
to get their bread
tomorrow

Load Up Well

(Translated by Danijela Trajkovic)

Load up well
hungry throat of winter and don't be afraid

Memories can be lit
but thumbnails can never

Stana Dinić Skočajić is a Serbian poetess and writer. She graduated from the University of Belgrade, with a degree in Serbo-Croatian language and Yugoslav literature. Her poems and short stories are translated into several languages and included in many anthologies. Rewarded for her work, she lives in Niš, Serbia.

The Pangolin Review; Issue 7, 8 November 2018