

Under a Dome

Let's put them all in a great glass dome,
separate from the world we've come to know.
Infants of every color and race,
let them decide how they'll run this place.

No teaching by humans personalities,
only guidance by an unbiased machine.

Not knowing any learned racial pain,
see how much unity they could gain.
See interracial marriage come about,
no prejudice, none would they shout.

And in the end society would be changed,
a new insight we would certainly gain.]

EG Ted Davis is a published poet within several online literary journals who resides in Boise, ID.

The Pangolin Review; Issue 9, March 8, 2019